DISCOVER NPH HONDURAS

A thriving, bustling community, Rancho Santa Fe is the second oldest of the NPH homes. Over 400 hundred boys and girls make their home in this vast wooded oasis in the hills—a metropolis in comparison to the surrounding quiet pueblos—while older youths study and live in Tegucigalpa. A new home in Catacamas serves youths transitioning into stable, long-term living environments, including their biological families when possible.

DID YOU KNOW?

- There are special homes for severely disabled children, girls and boys with varying degrees of special needs, and for elderly adults who have no family to care for them.
- About half of the furniture, school uniforms and shoes used by the children are made by pequeños in the vocational workshops.
- Approximately 57% of all the food eaten in the home is grown or produced on the ranch, including 25% of meat, 56% of fruit and vegetables, and 99% of the milk and dairy products.
- During 2017, 13 new living spaces were opened to transition children from peer-grouped housing into same-gender, mixed-aged housing.
- The NPH OneFamily program was launched in 2017 to reintegrate and support youth from the NPH home who are now able to live with their biological families. The program currently supports 44 children.
- In 2017, the Honduran National Directorate for Children, Youth, and Family awarded NPH Honduras their highest rating for NGOs operating homes for children in the country.
- Community service programs include a soup kitchen for children and a daycare center for single mothers.
- The Holy Family Surgery Center provides outpatient services for NPH children and the rural poor as well as medical training.
