Did You Know?

- Rancho Santa Fe, the main home, is a vast wooded oasis in the hills – a metropolis in comparison to the surrounding quiet pueblos.
- Older youths study and live in Tegucigalpa.
- Casa de los Ángeles in Tegucigalpa provides a loving home and round-the-clock care to severely disabled children. ▶
- Casa Eva at Rancho Santa Fe (the main site) is home to elderly adults who have no family to care for them.
- Casa Mi Esperanza in Catacamas provides a temporary home for at-risk children while a safe and permanent living situation is found.
- To meet the needs of the physically impaired, vital improvements have been made, such as remodeling five homes, constructing wheelchair accessibility paths/ramps, and expanding their therapy services.
- Approximately 27% of all the food eaten in the home is grown or produced on the ranch, including 60% of meat, 10% of fruit and vegetables, and 100% of the milk and dairy products. ▶
- The NPH OneFamily program reintegrates and supports youth from the NPH home who are now able to live with their biological families.
- San José Family Center in Mata de Plátano provides vulnerable children, adolescents, and families with tutoring, therapies, youth empowerment, healthcare, and nutritional assistance.
- Holy Family Surgery Center provides outpatient services for NPH children and the rural poor as well as medical training.
